Free meal, food drive to be held next week

□ Hunger Awareness Week events kick off Sunday.

By BRANDI BARHITE
The BG News

Students often complain about University food, but when it comes down to it, half the world would prefer the often-loathed Student Union's hamburgers to nothing at all.

Hunger Awareness Week kicks off Sunday and runs through Nov. 22. In honor of the event, there will be a canned food drive collection all week and the first ever Hunger Banquet open to the first 100 to 125 people.

At a hunger banquet, participants are assigned to a world population and served the food that their population would have access to.

Co-sponsored by the Honors Program, Honors Student Association and the University Activities Organization, the 1997 Hunger Banquet is being held to demonstrate the unequal distribution of food and resources in the world.

Speaker focuses on female unity

□ Event is concerned with attaining cohesiveness between women and on campus.

By ROCHELLE CONVERSE
The BG News

Achieving unity among African American women on a predominantly white campus was discussed Monday as part of founders week for the Sigma Gamma Rho sorority.

Carolyn Brightharp, doctoral student in higher education administration, led an informal discussion with students extending the issue to include all women.

"It's more than just multiculturalism, it's about unity in the community," she said.

Brightharp questioned why women are so quick to break relationships with women because of romantic relationships or a change in social status. The group concluded that issues of self-esteem played a role in that process.

"We fight and alienate others as women," she said, when women could find commonalities that would bring them together.

Although issues of race and competition tend to separate women, Brightharp said there are more issues women have in common.

"There needs to come a time when we all come together and bridge the gap of things that affect all of us," she said, and "it starts with you."

Some ways women can help each other included supporting each other's programs as well as achieving self-acceptance to avoid problems with self-esteem.

"Stop others from defining us," Brightharp said. "You don't need a man or sorority to define you."

Megan Mullins, freshman ceramic art major, said although the event extended beyond issues of race between women, she thought unity first begins within each person.

"I agree that women need to come together and work through everything to create unity," she said.

The event is one of several the sorority will be hosting this week. Celebrating their 75th year, the sorority's theme is "Unity in the community."

"We've noticed there's not a lot of unity on campus," said Anne McCowan, president of Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority Inc.

The event, as well as others through the week, are open to members of the University community, not just those familiar or affiliated with the group.

University strives to educate about assault

□ BGSU administrators hope to change student perceptions about sexual assault.

By SARAH BEDNARSKI
The BG News

Sexual assault is an issue the University wants to make students more aware of and hope friends of victims will support and believe them.

According to Barbara Hoffman, University Health Services, changing perceptions is a start to helping victims of sexual assault. She said people think if someone knows their attacker or is under the influence of alcohol or other substances, then it isn't rape.

"Society has this perception that if you kiss someone or touch someone then you have to accept what happens next," Hoffman said. "We need to change these views."

More education on sexual assault and acquaintance rape needs to be implemented, said Ute Lowery, assistant director of University student housing and residence programs.

As a result of negative press victims often think it is their word on trial, Lowery said. She said if a victim tells a friend, then they should believe the victim and help them.

"Believe your friend," Lowery said. "If someone is willing to tell you what has happened then listen to them. Take it from there."

According to a national survey, four out of five women who were victims of sexual assault knew their attackers. Both Lowery and Hoffman said

How To Assist A Rape Survivor

The following is a list of ways to help rape victims:

- Believe them
- Take them to a private area
- Ask, "When did this happen?"
- Ask, "Can you tell me about it?"
- Offer comfort measures
- Help the person see what their alternatives and their possible consequences are about what to do next
- Prepare the person for the possible emotional and physical aftermath of rape many people are unaware and refuse to admit when they have been sexually assaulted.

"It incorporates everything that's involuntary," Lowery said. "Many honestly don't realize they have been assaulted."

Lowery said sexual assault is the 'umbrella' term for many different things. She said rape is under that and is the act of forcing someone to have sexual intercourse.

Hoffman said when someone comes to her for treatment she is required under law to report it to the police. She said if the student wishes to remain anonymous they can.

According to Hoffman, stu-

Relieved au pair will appeal ruling

The Associated Press

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. -- Louise Woodward today pronounced herself "enormously relieved" that a judge allowed her to go free, but still would seek total exoneration in the death of an 8-month-old boy whom she said she loved.

In her first public comment since Judge Hiller Zobel's decision Monday to reduce her conviction to manslaughter, the 19-year-old former au pair also said she did not plan to sell her story to the news media.

Zobel on Monday sentenced Ms. Woodward to the 279 days she served in prison since her arrest Feb. 5 and ordered her released to bring a "compassionate conclusion" to the case. The baby, Matthew Eappen, was taken to a hospital Feb. 4, suffering from a brain injury, and died five days later.

"I am enormously relieved that Judge Zobel has seen fit to give me back my liberty," Ms. Woodward said in a statement released through her attorneys.

"My relief at being freed does not reduce my desire to obtain total vindication in a case where, as I have said under oath, I committed no crime whatsoever."

"I loved Matthew," she said. "I know that his family is unable to understand or believe me, because they are so convinced that I killed him or at least contributed to his death." She said she hoped further investigation would eventually convince the Eappen family of her innocence.

Jones asks for changes in charges

The Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. -- President Clinton's lawyers say Paula Corbin Jones is trying to change her lawsuit from an attempt to clear her name into an attack fueled by rumors and gossip.

After questions about her own character were raised, Mrs. Jones asked a federal judge for permission to drop all defamation claims and to list new allegations against the president. Clinton's lawyers objected Monday.

If the changes are granted, Mrs. Jones' past would be off-limits and her lawyers would be able to explore her new claim that women who allegedly "succumbed" to Clinton's sexual advances benefited.

That would "make it not a trial about Paula Jones and what did or did not occur at the Excelsior Hotel in May 1991, but rather, a trial about the rumors and gossip concerning the president's alleged contact with other women," Clinton's lawyers wrote.

They also said Mrs. Jones' attempt to withdraw her defamation claim and add new charges indicates her goal is to harm Clinton and not to restore her reputation.

Mrs. Jones claims Clinton propositioned her while she was a state worker and he was Arkansas governor. Her sexual harassment suit claims Arkansas state trooper Danny Ferguson helped arrange the meeting.

Clinton initially wanted the trial delayed until he was out of office, but Mrs. Jones told courts she needed a speedy trial "to restore her injured reputation." She also said she had no interest in "political embarrassment or financial gain," Clinton's lawyers wrote in their filing.

The Supreme Court ruled last May that Mrs. Jones deserved her day in court in a timely manner.

In her original lawsuit, Mrs.

Jones said Ferguson damaged her reputation by claiming she was eager to be Clinton's mistress after meeting him May 8, 1991, at a Little Rock hotel room.

Less than two weeks after Ferguson lawyer Bill Bristow began interviewing people about Mrs. Jones to "determine what her reputation is," she asked to drop the defamation claim.

Clinton's trial is scheduled for May 27. With witness lists due in a month it would prejudice Clinton if he had to defend a lawsuit that reaches wider, his lawyers wrote.

Leaving his hotel Tuesday, Robert Bennett, one of Clinton's attorneys, puts a handkerchief in his mouth to remind reporters that there is a gag order in Paula Jones' sexual harassment lawsuit against the president.

Before 'service,' BGSU must ask what we want

Your age might have something to do with it

True, the drinking age is not a huge matter of concern. But that does not make the laws prohibiting consumption more right than any other case of discrimination. The drinking age and social responsibility are issues that affect the daily lives of most of us. It is a small obstacle, as Bill put it, a "three foot fence," but every once in a while someone will trip and fall on that fence. Why can't we just remove it?

SHOOTING

Teen arrested for shooting death of hunter

NEW PHILADELPHIA, Ohio -- Authorities have arrested a 17-year-old for the shooting death of a hunter.

David W. Butler II of Port Washington was arrested Saturday and charged with a juvenile delinquency count of aggravated murder for the death of Roger Sanders, 43, of Port Washington.

Butler lived with Sanders and was his daughter's boyfriend, Sheriff Harold McKimmie said in a statement released Monday.

He was being kept in Tuscarawas County Attention Center, a juvenile detention center. He was to be arraigned Thursday in juvenile court.

McKimmie said authorities were investigating a second suspect.

Sanders' body was found Friday near Peoli off state Route 258 in Perry Township, about 50 miles south of Akron. He died from four .22 caliber bullet wounds to the head.

He had not been seen since Nov. 4 when he went out to run two hunting dogs.

Authorities have said the case was unrelated to the shooting deaths of hunters Duane and William Lockard of Suffield. Their bodies were found Nov. 2 in adjoining Harrison County.

ACCIDENT

Two vehicles collide at Salt Fork State Park

WINTERSET, Ohio -- Two vehicles collided head-on near Salt Fork State Park on Monday, killing all three people inside, the State Highway Patrol said.

The crash took place around 2 p.m. on U.S. 22 less than a mile from this Guernsey County village.

The patrol identified the victims as Raymond Warnock, 83, of Kimbolton, in Guernsey County; his 72-year-old wife, Marjorie; and Leroy Cade, 66, of Bergholz in Jefferson County.

The two men were pronounced dead at the scene. Mrs. Warnock was flown by helicopter to Grant Medical Center in Columbus, where she died around 6:45 p.m., the patrol said.

Trooper V.K. Perkins said a preliminary investigation indicated that Cade was westbound when he tried to pass another vehicle and crashed into an eastbound car driven by Warnock.

The patrol was continuing its investigation.

THREATENING MAIL

Man to plead guilty to sending threatening letter

COLUMBUS -- A former state Bureau of Motor Vehicles employee on Monday agreed to plead guilty in federal court to sending a threatening letter to a driver he believed had cut him off.

Danny L. Jones, 44, of Reynoldsburg, faces five years in prison, a $250,000 fine and three years of supervised release, according to a plea agreement filed in U.S. District Court. He agreed to plead guilty to one charge of mailing threatening communications.

The State Highway Patrol said Jones sent motorists anonymous letters over three years that contained threats to "poke your eyes out," "cut your head off and hand it to you on a platter," and "dispose of you like trash."

He was arrested when a woman jotted down a license plate number after a run-in. The plate was traced to Jones after she called Reynoldsburg police about a threatening letter.

Neither Jones' lawyer, Stephen P. Ames, nor Assistant U.S. Attorney Brenda Shoemaker immediately returned phone calls seeking comment.

Authorities said Jones, who had worked at the bureau for six years in the microfilm-processing section, used BMV computers to identify motorists. He has since been fired.

Before the case was moved to federal court, Jones faced 11 charges of aggravated menacing in Franklin County and about 30 similar charges in four other counties.

Federal prosecutors agreed to file just one charge under terms of the plea agreement, but did not make any promises regarding sentencing.

A date for sentencing by Judge John Holschuh has not yet been set.

BOUNCING CHECKS

Thousands of canceled checks fall from truck on I-71

CINCINNATI -- Police and harried workers had to scramble to chase down canceled checks which fell Tuesday from a delivery truck on Interstate 71.

"There were thousands of them," police spokeswoman Kim Bemmes said of the scattered checks.

Employees of Priority Dispatch Inc. were delivering canceled checks when a bag fell from the back of the pickup truck. A truck following behind struck the bag and scattered the contents along a busy section of the interstate, where two lanes are closed for construction, police said.

Police helped company employees retrieve the checks as passing motorists slowed down to watch.

"They were chasing them," Ms. Bemmes said. "They're pretty positive they got them all."

The company had no immediate comment.

Explosion rocks Hall of Fame

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND -- A buildup of methane gas under the ground around the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum may have caused an explosion in a vault near the hall that holds electrical equipment.

The explosion in the Cleveland Public Power vault, an underground concrete enclosure 18 feet wide by 18 feet long and 10 feet in height, threw metal shards from a manhole cover hundreds of feet into the air. At least four parked vehicles were damaged in the Sunday explosion, but there were no injuries

"I really don't know what happened here and we won't until the fire department completes its investigation."

Jim Majer

Commissioner of Cleveland Public Power

and no damage to the hall, authorities said.

Witnesses said they heard a loud boom, and that the ground shook with the force of the explosion.

Cleveland Fire Department investigators said Monday that they were testing air samples from inside the vault and results should be available in about a week.

"Something was ignited and caused an explosion, said Cleveland Fire Chief Paul Stubbs. "Now we have to figure out what Naturally occurring methane is a possibility. It's created from the breakdown of organic material, and there was a landfill in that area."

Stubbs said fire investigators had ruled out explosives as a cause of the blast, and said there were no sewer lines in the vault to produce potentially explosive sewer gases. He said a sweep by East Ohio Gas workers found no leaks in area natural gas lines.

Jim Majer, Commissioner of Cleveland Public Power, said the vault has a system that regularly vents heat and gas and there are no sewer or gas lines running through the vault.

Plans for baseball denied in Dayton

The Associated Press

DAYTON -- A businesswoman said Wednesday she was scrapping plans to bring a minor-league team to the city and intends to sue Major League Baseball for discriminating against her.

Sherrie Myers, who has been awaiting MLB approval for the team for seven weeks, said at a news conference that she has learned the major leagues plan to reject her application.

She accused Jimmie Lee Solomon, MLB executive director of minor league baseball, of saying he did not intend to approve any application for Dayton if it did not include a minority-group member as majority owner. Myers said that position was restated by a number of other major-league officials.

"This is a very clear case of reverse discrimination," said Myers, who is white. "For Major League Baseball to discriminate against me simply because of the color of my skin has no foundation in their existing rules and is unconstitutional and clearly illegal."

MLB spokesman Rich Levin denied any discrimination.

"We have made it clear to every group that there must be some minority representation," said Levin.

He said it is not true that there is a requirement for the majority owner to be part of a minority.

A message left for Solomon was not returned.

MLB said Myers' proposal would violate a rule that prohibits anyone directly or indirectly from having an ownership interest in two teams in the same league. Myers' husband, Tom Dickson, owns the Lansing Lugnuts of the Midwest League, the same league Dayton hopes to join.

"We would like to see a group bring a minor-league team to Dayton, but so far, the group that applied has not demonstrated it meets baseball's requirements," Acting Baseball Commissioner Bud Selig said in a statement. "We will approve any group that does."

Myers had applied to buy the Class A Rockford (Ill.) Cubbies of the Midwest League and move the club to Dayton for the 1999 season. For more than a year, she has been working on the $22.7 million project with city officials and downtown boosters.

It was not immediately clear what effect Myers' departure would have on the future of baseball in the city.

Maureen Pero, president of the Downtown Dayton Partnership, said if other investors enter the picture, they would have to start at ground zero.

Discrimination alleged in Cleveland banks

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND -- A fair housing group charged Tuesday that eight banks with offices in Cleveland discriminated against Hispanic customers trying to get information about home mortgages.

The Housing Advocates Inc. has filed lending discrimination charges against the banks with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development based on a study it conducted with a $280,000 grant from HUD.

The study's findings were released at a news conference Tuesday.

Among other things, the housing group found bank officers spent an average of 10 minutes longer with white mortgage customers than with Hispanics. Officers were also more likely to tell whites about special home loan programs and were more likely to fulfill promises by providing follow-up information to white customers.

"The evidence we've uncovered indicates there's been widespread discrimination against Hispanic customers."

Edward Kramer

director of The Housing Advocates

"The evidence we've uncovered indicates there's been widespread discrimination against Hispanic consumers," said Edward Kramer, director of The Housing Advocates.

Instances of what the housing group called discriminatory acts occurred at branches of all the institutions that were studied.

Twenty-two actions were considered discriminatory, from refusing service to a Hispanic customer, to a bank officer offering a business card to a white customers but not a Hispanic person.

HUD can impose a fine of up to $50,000 for each discriminatory practice it verifies, Kramer said.

The banks included Ohio Savings Bank, where 18 instances of alleged discrimination were found; Key Bank, 12 instances; Fifth Third Bank, 12; Third Federal Savings and Loan, 10; Charter One Bank, 8; National City Bank, 8; Bank One, 7; and Star Bank, 5.

Calls were made to all the banks but offices were closed due to the Veterans Day holiday. Only Ohio Savings President Robert Goldberg, who said he didn't know about the study, was available to comment.

The Housing Advocates said the timing of the study's release on a holiday was coincidental.

Three branches of each of the eight banks were tested during a two-week period last fall. A white individual and Hispanic person would go to each branch saying they were looking for information about obtaining a mortgage.

The testers were of the same gender and similar age and gave similar information about their incomes and the type of houses they wanted.

On average, bank officers spent 19 minutes, 37 seconds with white customers compared with 9:34 with Hispanics, the study said.

When bank officers said they would call white clients with follow-up information, they always did.

Mall smoking lounge angers teen parents

The Associated Press

ALPHARETTA, Ga. -- Discreetly tucked away behind tinted windows, a smoker's lounge in North Point Mall is filled with shoppers who want a quick fix without braving the chilly outside air.

The rest of the mall, like more than 80 percent of the malls in the United States, is smoke-free. Smokers can light up in its restaurants, but the lounge has a special distinction.

It is one of two nationwide sponsored by R.J. Reynolds -- and that has angered some who say the tobacco giant is targeting teens who like to hang out in the mall.

"Who are the only ones that really spend a lot of time leisurely in shopping malls? Kids," said Kathleen Scheg, legislative counsel for Action on Smoking and Health, an anti-smoking group based in Washington. "It really shows how insincere the industry is in its claim that it doesn't want to encourage young people to take up smoking."

Opponents say the lounge, which opened in September, sends a message that cigarettes are so popular, smokers get their own special room.

"It's ridiculous. They should have to go outside and smoke," said Claudia Mitchell, a mother of four who lives in this wealthy Atlanta suburb. "It brings a negative image into the mall."

Lisa Shepherd, spokeswoman for North Point Mall, said mall managers didn't even consider that the lounge would tempt teens to smoke. At Reynolds' request, the lounge is open only to those 21 and older. The legal age for buying cigarettes in Georgia is 18.

Shepherd said the lounge has been largely well-received.

Suspected drug cartel leader arrested, could be extradited

The Associated Press

SAN DIEGO -- A suspected high-ranking member of a powerful drug cartel was arrested in Mexico over the weekend and could be extradited to the United States to face prosecution.

Everardo Arturo Paez Martinez was arrested by Mexican authorities Saturday outside a restaurant in Tijuana and was taken to Mexico City. The U.S. government filed a provisional arrest warrant for Paez, the first step in seeking his extradition.

Paez, 30, was charged in an indictment unsealed in San Diego on Monday with conspiring to distribute about 2,200 pounds of cocaine in the United States.

The Mexican federal attorney general's office said Paez has been identified as a leader of the powerful Arellano Felix cartel. The San Diego Union-Tribune quoted an unidentified official as saying he has a key role, responsible for smuggling drugs into the United States.

The arrest is part of a major U.S. effort to destroy the Tijuana-based drug organization run by the Arellano Felix brothers. The New York Times quoted unidentified U.S. officials as saying it is probably the most ambitious criminal investigation that the United States has ever run in Mexico.

U.S. officials also view it as a test of Mexico's willingness to extradite a suspected powerful drug trafficker. American authorities have been pushing their Mexican counterparts to pursue drug lords and look for ways to extradite them to the United States for prosecution.

Diplomats ask for Iraqi travel ban

The Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS -- Declaring that Iraqi defiance has reunited the Gulf War coalition, U.S. and British diplomats asked the Security Council on Tuesday to slap a travel ban on Iraq and warn of "further measures" unless it cooperates with U.N. arms inspectors.

But the resolution did not include the threat of military force should Iraq continue refusing to rescind its Oct. 29 order to expel American members of the U.N. weapons inspection team.

The draft also omitted a warning of "serious consequences" because of opposition from the French and Russians.

U.S. Ambassador Bill Richardson said the council would vote on the resolution Wednesday and he expected "near unanimity" among the 15 council members.

"This resolution is going to be passed tomorrow," Richardson said. "And we think it sends an unmistakable signal for Iraq to comply immediately."

Earlier, Richardson predicted a unanimous vote. Diplomatic sources said the lone holdout was China, which said it needed to consult Chinese leaders before deciding how to vote.

Both Lowery and Hoffman said the report of on campus rape is relatively low. They said that doesn't necessarily mean that it's not happening but victims are not reporting it.

Fear and wanting to forget about the assault is the reason victims don't want to report their assaults, Hoffman said.

"They think that if it's out of sight then it's out of mind," she said. "If it's forgotten then everything's okay."

Victims have several places to turn for help, Hoffman said. She said in addition to the University's counseling center, there is the Victims Advocacy Program (formerly The Link), which has a 24 hour crisis hotline to help victims.

HUNGER

This free meal will be prepared and randomly divided among the guests in high, middle and low-income groups. These groups will represent the actual food distribution in the world. Fifteen percent of the people at the banquet will be high class, 30 percent will be middle class and 50 percent will be in the low class.

Those that are high class will receive a gourmet meal, middle class will receive beans, rice and water, while the low class will receive only rice.

Brian Taylor, coordinator of this event, said that he hopes this dinner will raise awareness to the global food distribution and motivate people to alleviate this problem. He hopes that people will realize the importance of participating in food drives and begin to take steps to combat this problem.

According to the Oxfam's America's Fast Activities Handbook, one out of every four people in the world live in absolute poverty, and 800 million people, including 30 million in the United States, do not get enough to eat. Every day, 34,000 children under the age of five die from hunger and related causes. It also stated that enough food is produced to feed every child, woman, and man in the world, yet every day half of the world does not receive a decent meal.

The majority of those that are in the high class and overfed live in the United States. Jennifer Dembinski, Hunger Banquet coordinator, believes that this is an important issue because the United States has the most food and we do not realize the extent of the problem.

She encourages people to go and believes it will be an educational experience. "It will be a very good learning experience and an illustration of the hunger in the world," she said.

This banquet is open to the public and free of charge. It will be held on Nov. 23 from 5 p.m. -- 7 p.m. in the Kreischer Sundial. Reservations can be made in the UAO office (Student Union 330) and in the Honors Office (University Hall 104). An international student from Nigeria will also be speaking about hunger.

"It will be a nice educational event. You can get a free meal. There is nothing to lose," said Taylor.

Shooter 'loved' U.S., uncle says

The Associated Press

FAIRFAX, Va. -- A Pakistani convicted of killing two men in an alleged anti-American shooting spree outside the CIA once professed a love for this country and looked forward to visiting, his uncle said Tuesday.

"He always say that 'I like America, I love America and I want to go there,'" Amanullah Kasi said at a sentencing hearing for nephew Mir Aimal Kasi.

Prosecutors are asking for the death penalty for Kasi, who was convicted Monday in the 1993 rampage that also left three others wounded.

They claim Kasi was out to avenge the bombing of Iraq and American meddling in Muslim countries, but defense lawyers say Kasi was mentally ill, had no history of violence and cared little for politics.

Amanullah Kasi said his nephew was not politically active and harbored no hatred for the United States. One of Kasi's older brothers, Mir Weis Kasi, said Kasi was an apolitical loner who talked to himself as a teen-ager.

Three teachers from Kasi's hometown elementary school in Quetta, Pakistan, described him as a solemn boy and a poor math student. One, Rahel Ernest Nathaniel, wept as she looked at a class photo of Kasi as a boy.

"That's Aimal," she said, using the name Kasi's friends and family use. "He was quiet, very shy. Not a talkative child."

Kasi, who came from a wealthy background and inherited $100,000 when his father died in 1989, came to the United States on a business visa in 1991.

Trial to highlight Unabomber's change from brilliant to bitter

The Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. -- The centerpiece of the Unabomber trial will be the mind of Theodore Kaczynski, the brilliant boy who turned into a technology-hating hermit embittered against everything from planes to pay phones.

With a mountain of evidence found in his Montana cabin pointing to him as the Unabomber, the trial that begins with jury selection Wednesday will focus on whether Kaczynski was a man with a "mental defect," not responsible for his actions, or prove that he's a rational, cold-blooded killer.

Kaczynski's own letters and journals provide the raw material for both sides.

One item, a letter in which Kaczynski wrote, "I can't wait until you die so I can spit on your corpse," suggests that the veneer of a socially concerned vigilante could well have masked childhood hatreds looking for an outlet, said Dr. Eugene Schoenfeld, a psychiatrist and forensic consultant.

"There's a lot of rage building up in this guy," he said. "And people will rationalize anger and violence through a cause -- a greater good that justifies destruction and murder."

In the Sacramento case, Kaczynski is charged with bombings that killed two and maimed two. Separately in New Jersey, he's charged in one death.

In all, the government claims Kaczynski is behind 16 bombings that killed three people and injured 23 over 18 years.

No longer the scruffy, wide-eyed mountain man arrested in April 1996, Kaczynski now appears in court wearing a tweed sports jacket with his hair and beard trimmed, looking every bit the professor he once was.

That courtroom image is more in keeping with the bright young boy whose mother read him Scientific American on their porch in Evergreen Park, Ill. But his mother, Wanda, has said she believes her son's problems began shortly after his birth.

At 9 months, Kaczynski was hospitalized with a drug reaction. He was forcibly pinned to a bed for a week, and lay virtually untouched by human hands. His mother says Kaczynski came home listless, and believes her son was never the same.

But otherwise, Kaczynski the child showed few signs of developing into an angry loner. Acquaintances said he laughed and joked, played in the band and did so well in school he wound up skipping two grades. As he grew older, though, Kaczynski seemed increasingly immature compared to his classmates.

Blackney deserves chance to fix team

After seven rollercoaster years, the Man Who Would Be King of Falcon football is scrambling to rebuild his program from the junior college ranks.

That's the sad state of affairs concerning coach Gary Blackney and the Bowling Green football program. The Falcons are in a nosedive, winning just 12 games over the past three years culminating with a five-game losing streak to finish this past season at 3-8.

BG football, once the cornerstone of a fledgling conference, no longer inspires fear in the hearts of Mid-American Conference foes. Instead, the Falcons drew snickers this year for an embarrassing loss to perennial patsy Kent.

Since dominating the first half of this decade, BG has been in a headlong slide. There have been a few bright spots -- an upset of Missouri on the road in 1995, and victories over rival Miami the past two seasons -- but three straight losses to Toledo on top of a host of other miscues have helped rip the integrity of the program apart.

A 29-20 loss to Kent -- a team BG had beaten in 22 of the past 23 years -- was the most telling game of all. Kent is a poor football team that didn't play particularly well against BG -- and still won by nine points.

Blackney's downfall has been recruiting. He won championships his first two years with former head coach Moe Ankney's players, but he has not recruited very many skilled players into the program over the past few years.

The rest of the league has passed the Falcons right on by.

This is most obvious in the skilled positions and in the defensive secondary. Although Chioke Bradley played well down the stretch this season, the Falcons haven't been able to cover good opposing receivers for three years. Likewise, there hasn't been a good, reliable running back or wide receiver the past few years.

One would think that sometime in Blackney's seven years the Falcons would be able to get at least one or two good players in any of these positions.

It hasn't happened. The Falcons have tried to plug players into different spots, but have failed.

The most telling statistic concerning recruiting is this year's senior class. The players in this class were recruited in 1992 -- after Blackney won his second straight ti-

Vallow leads BG to promised land

□ BG goalkeeper Scott Vallow provides a mental and physical spark for the Falcons.

By JIM TOCCO
The BG News

The bellwether of the Falcon soccer team spends the better part of 90 minutes standing around doing nothing.

So, he spends the time talking. And running the field. All the time coiled up like a spring, waiting for that one chance to give his physical contribution to the game.

So goes the season for Scott Vallow, the Falcons' goalkeeper and vocal leader. He sits back in his box, surveying the field and yelling out an unending flow of advice.

"A lot of times, it's hard back there," he said. "Imagine just standing in one place for 90 minutes, picking up a couple crosses and making a couple of saves. The one reason I'm doing a lot of talking is to keep myself in the game ... the only way for me to stay in the game is to be vocal."

And Vallow is well-known for being vocal on and off the field. The junior keeper has the outpoken and articulate qualities of a leader. He's what a journalist might call a quote machine.

So Vallow spends most of those 90 minutes using the vocal qualities he was born with to offer his mental contribution to the game.

"You always need a great quarterback," said BG coach Mel Mahler, comparing the goalkeeper position to football's leadership role. "I don't care how well you run the ball, you still need a good quarterback. You still need someone to lead, and that's why you need a good goalkeeper. You need someone that the players have confidence in, and that's what Scott brings."

Vallow accepts this leadership role eagerly.

"As far as my leadership role on the field, I consider myself a leader, even though I'm not one of the three senior captains," he said. "I still consider myself a leader. I know that I want people to look at me and find out why I'm successful, as far as the work ethic and everything. I've always considered myself a leader. I'm in a leadership position, and if I'm down, our whole team is down, it seems. If I'm always positive, I think that helps our team out. If I'm quiet back there, it seems like everyone else is that way too."

The success he's referring to is being in the top 10 in the nation in goals-against average each of his first two seasons, and being well on his way this year. In his freshman season at BG, he finished second in the nation with a razor-thin 0.52 average. He's also been a very successful keeper in club soccer.

Aside from that, Vallow knows nothing but championships. Since his arrival here in 1995, the Falcons have won the MAC title every year.

"I go into every game with the mentality that no one can score on me," he said. "I'm invincible. Not cocky, not anything like that, but that's just the way I approach every game."

He's not deceiving, either. Sometimes a supreme confidence in yourself and your athletic ability can come off as arrogance, but Vallow is not cocky. He's just someone who knows he can make a contribution, so he does.

Before any big game, you can see Vallow make that contribution. When the team huddles up for its pregame talk, Vallow reg-

Falcon volleyball faces MAC-leading Ball State

When the Bowling Green volleyball team takes on Ball State tonight at Anderson Arena, it will be the clash of the reigning champion vs. the former champion.

Ball State has won the regular-season title three of the last four years and currently leads the Mid-American Conference this season with a 13-1 record.

But before the Cardinals began their recent dominance, the Falcon volleyball team was the premier team in the conference, capturing the crown three times between 1989 and 1992.

"It's always a competitive match because both schools have strong programs and strong traditions," Falcon coach Denise Van De Walle said.

Van De Walle knows well of the traditions of both schools, as she was an assistant coach for the Cardinals two years before taking over BG's program in 1983. Van De Walle, a graduate of

Ryan Johnson
BG News

Ball State, also coached a high school team in Muncie, Ind. for three years.

"I have a great fondness and affection for Ball State and the city of Muncie," she said. "But that turns to competitiveness once the match starts."

There's also extra motivation for tonight's match for senior setter Wendy Watkins, who is from Muncie.

"It's a little different because I know some of the players and went to school with some of them," Watkins said. "But it's more important that we play well since we haven't beaten them since I've been here."

The Falcons have lost nine straight to the Cardinals.

BG (16-11, 7-7 MAC) enters the match in third place in the MAC East division after a weekend split against Akron and Kent.

Ball State (19-6, 13-1 MAC) enters atop the MAC West division and the Cardinals have won 15 of their last 16 matches.

"It's a bigger match for them

MAC football is on the rise: Is BG included?

It truly has been a dream season for Mid-American Conference football.

Going into this past weekend, four different MAC teams were receiving votes in either The Associated Press poll or the ESPN/USA Today coaches poll.

And as much as I hate to see Toledo succeed, the Rockets were doing an admirable job representing the MAC as No. 18 in the AP poll.

Last week's results may have blemished the chance for a MAC team to finish in the top 25 (Ball State beats Toledo 35-3, what happened there?), but the MAC is still enjoying the most media coverage in recent memory.

Depending on this Saturday's game between Marshall and Ohio, the MAC might be able to have the championship matchup that most people have been dreaming about since the beginning of the season:

Mike LEONARD
BG News

Toledo vs. Marshall. The epicenter of activity in the MAC vs. the flashy new kid on the block, Chris Wallace vs. Randy Moss.

If this were the matchup, the inaugural MAC championship game has the potential to be a classic shootout.

All this would be displayed to a live national audience via ESPN. The MAC knows what's at stake Dec. 6. The league office will be making every effort to turn Marshall University Stadium into a Roman Colosseum for college football.

Take a look at what has happened this year in the MAC:

■ Ohio, after a 29-year drought, is two games short of winning the MAC championship. Before last year, the halftime show at Peden Stadium was the only reason to watch OU football.

■ Miami "upsets" then 12th-ranked Virginia Tech by 30 points. I'd love to see that other Miami take on the boys from Oxford.

■ Marshall proves that it is for real, losing only to West Virginia in Morgantown, W. Va. and to Miami in Oxford.

■ Western Michigan comes back to life after going 2-9 last season.

■ Ball State salvages its respectability by routing UT.

■ Even Kent and Akron are showing signs of life.

I only have one problem with the new era in the MAC. Conspicuous by their Green Falcons.

True, after losing a talented backfield, the prospects for the Falcons may have dipped a little. The Falcons, however, definitely had the talent to at least break .500 this season.

Pointing fingers at this point is counterproductive. The simple fact is that BG has historically been a bastion of MAC football. For coach Gary Blackney and company to call in sick at the most exciting time in MAC football history seems almost blasphemous.

If Blackney can't get the job done, he deserves the same treatment that Jim Larranaga should have received long before last season. Contract or not, Blackney must go.

The MAC has a right to be proud. From top to bottom, this season has been an excellent cry for more respect.
BG deserves to be part of it.

Falcons continue to make mistakes

If it's not one problem, it's another.

After struggling offensively for the last few weeks, the Falcon hockey team experienced defensive problems against Western Michigan Saturday.

In most of the games the Falcons (2-7-1) have played to this point, defense has kept them close, but Saturday it all fell apart. The Broncos took advantage of numerous BG errors in a 8-3 beating of the Falcons.

Many of the Bronco goals came on odd-man rushes, caused by over-aggressive defensemen in the offensive zone.

"We had veteran guys making mistakes," BG coach Buddy Powers said. "Once you're in the junior or senior years, you should be able to play a defensive aspect, mistake-free hockey. Mentally, you should never be beat. Some of those situations were mental errors."

Prior to the Western Michigan game, BG gave up only five goals in the past three games, including a 3-1 win against Ferris State Nov. 1 and a narrow 2-1 loss to Notre Dame Friday.

Goaltender Mike Savard has been solid in net to this point, although he didn't have a strong game against Western either. He has a 3.29 goals-against average and a save percentage of 88.8.

Special teams

There remains a wide gap between BG's success on the power play and that of its opponents.

Through Saturday, BG had connected on only seven of 66 power plays for less than 11 percent. Of late, it has improved slightly with a percentage of

Hockey Notebook
William SANDERSON
BG News Sportswriter

13.33 in Central Collegiate Hockey Association games.

By comparison, opponents are connecting on 20.29 percent of their power plays. Bad games against Clarkson and Western Michigan were in large part responsible.

Holzinger's assists lead the way

Team captain Brad Holzinger has only one goal on the season, but he leads the Falcons in scoring. Holzinger's one goal and 10 assists gives him four more points than Dan Price and Dave Faulkner.

Price has scored two goals in the past two weeks to draw even with Faulkner who has suffered a bit of a drought after a quick start. Faulkner still leads the team in goals with five.

Doug Schueller, Adam Edinger and Adam Lamarre round out the leading scorers with five points apiece.

The injury report

B.J. Adams and Zach Ham are being held out of practice this week to rest injuries. Adams has a groin injury and Ham is having back problems.

Both players are expected to play Saturday against Ohio State.

Crime report

Freshman right wing Dennis Williams will serve a one-game suspension this Saturday against Ohio State.

Williams received a major fighting penalty during the second period Saturday night after an incident with Western Michigan's Jeff Rucinsky.

Rucinsky and Williams were mixing it up behind the Falcon net when the referee saw Williams throw three punches to Rucinsky's head and ejected him.

Falcons more dedicated than last year

Despite all the obstacles placed in their way this season, the Bowling Green swim team is better off this year as opposed to last season.

According to Falcon coach Randy Julian, the work ethic of this team is making it better.

"We've been swimming two-a-days since the first week of October," Julian said. "The area that this team has most improved in is the weight room. Due to that, we are swimming faster than we did a year ago."

Julian says that in past years, individual swimmers like Tom Stoltz and Cheryl Patterson were leading the way in practice. This season the entire squad is exhibiting a willingness to work at a higher training level. "There seems to be a better air of confidence over the whole team this year," Julian said.

Illness

One obstacle that has plagued

Swimming Notebook
Michael LEONARD
BG News Sportswriter

the Falcons all season has been a plethora of injuries and minor illnesses.

"It's been like this all fall," Julian said. "It's driving me crazy. Something's biting us hard and we have to work through it."

Most of the Falcons' problems have come from sinus infections, head colds and other respiratory ailments. There have also been some minor injuries to the team.

"We've had little nagging injuries," Julian said. "For example, Jeanine Schlondorn had a great meet against Toledo, but she's had an ankle injury that hasn't allowed her to kick at full strength. We've got to get past all this."

Team ready for Dual Meet Extravaganza

The Falcons will be going into a uniquely formatted meet this weekend where they will swim three shortened meets against three separate teams.

BG will face Cincinnati in a five-event meet on Friday night before taking on Southern Illinois in a seven-event meet Saturday morning. A separate diving meet will be held before the men take on Iowa and the women battle Illinois in a six-event format.

The format of the meet will give some of the Falcons their first opportunity to compete in their stroke events at 100 yards. "This team's loose and ready," Julian said. "Our kids have been chomping at the bit to get at this meet. It will be fun."

Julian will also have some extra incentive for his team to do well as Southern Illinois was Julian's first college coaching job.

It will not be easy for the Falcons, however. Cincinnati's men defeated Big Ten power Ohio State by a wide margin earlier this season. Iowa has consistently placed in the top five of the Big Ten over the last 20 years. Meanwhile, Illinois has already knocked off Villanova and other powerhouse programs this season.

Far from shying away from teams of this nature, the Falcons welcome this challenge.

"This is why we're going," Julian said. "It's a chance to take on some big-time programs. That's why you get into collegiate athletics."

Martinez captures NL Cy Young

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Pedro Martinez ended the Atlanta Braves' streak of NL Cy Young Awards at four, easily beating Greg Maddux and Denny Neagle.

Martinez, put on the trade market by Montreal immediately after the season, received 25 of 28 first-place votes and 134 points in balloting released Tuesday by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

"I'm dedicating this award to Juan Marichal, who I think deserved this award and didn't get it," Martinez said, referring to his countryman, regarded as the greatest pitcher from the Dominican Republic.

Maddux, who won the award four consecutive times from 1992-95, was second with the remaining first-place votes and 75 points. Neagle, his teammate on the Braves, was third with 24 points, followed by Philadelphia's Curt Schilling with 12 and Houston's Darryl Kile with seven.

"I don't consider myself better than Maddux right now," Martinez said.

Atlanta and Maddux have combined to monopolize the award in recent years. After Tom Glavine won it in 1991, Maddux won it with the Chicago Cubs in 1992, then repeated in his first three seasons with the Braves. John Smoltz then won it last year.

Martinez, a 26-year-old right-hander, joined with Schilling to become the first pair of pitchers in 25 years to reach 300 strikeouts in the same season.

Martinez went 17-8 and led the majors with a 1.90 ERA, becoming the first ERA leader with 300 strikeouts since Steve Carlton in 1972. Opponents hit just .184 against him, the lowest average against any major league pitcher last season. His 305 strikeouts were second in the majors, 14 behind Schilling's total, and his 13 complete games led both leagues.

"I think that the ERA and the 300 strikeouts really shined on top of everything," Martinez said.

With a 65-39 career record, Martinez is more sought after than any of the free-agent pitchers on the market.
